

I'm not robot

Continue

Funny kid test answers azyland iStock/andresQ: Use the word congenial in a sentence. A: When you leave the gravy too long, congenials. iStock/MoMoradQ: Writing about the Importance of Animals in Mice and Males. A: The mice are very important — without them, you would have only the men. Originally published: February 09, 2018Originally Published in Reader's Digest These hysterical children's test responses are too brilliant to deal with the great thing about children is that they have no filters and they are probably the most heartfelt creatures on Earth. The fact that they are so innocently honest can actually lead to some of the most hysterical and entertaining comments ever made. When kids approach different written tests, their unfiltered and non-cynical responses are even funnier than you'd ever expect. When it comes to kids, expect nothing but pure creativity. Sure, some of these kids were just smart pants, but some had the most honest and literate answers that it was simply cute. Technically, this kid was right. When one year ends another one starts, it's the circle of life we think. Anyway, we think he should get at least some points for logic. If the drawing on this test was to come to life, we'd say the person who drew it deserves to finish first, just for that sweet and honest spelling mistake. OK, so he didn't make the connection that these are all Scandinavian flags, but he pulled the Finnish line flag pretty neatly. Whether it's a coincidence or a case of bad quiz planning, we surely hope the authors of this test changed the entire order to this innocent but very funny result. Not only kids are like sponges that absorb everything they see on television or in video games, so are adults. Someone watched a little too much of the Hunger Games franchise. Can someone please tell this person that killing people is not the first and most appropriate solution for overcrowding. This is a classic example of how kids just see everything and they're so sincere they have no filters. This girl's mother sure would have hoped her daughter was a little less honest about what was going on at home. Hey, who said that a nice drink at the end of the day isn't what every mother needs from time to time. We're still trying to figure out if we should laugh or cry about this one. Has the reality television taken over our lives so much to the point that when asked to 'situation' the first thing that appears in someone's mind is a shirtless Mike Sorrentino? This boy knows how to set his priorities straight and we have a sense that he will do well in life when he grows up. At least he didn't 'kiss her' wrote before being a girlfriend. We have a feeling it wasn't the answer that was expected, but you have to admit, it's quite confusing because it was a direct 'yes' or 'no' A no, if you ask us, we can't pull this ship, it seems too complicated in our opinion. Wow, someone has studied really hard for this one! One! all test in life was as easy as this one, we would all have a better life. This kid definitely has the X-factor when it comes to solving math problems. Do you think someone is influenced by television shows? When you think about, the Big Bang Theory has really become such an inseparable part of our lives that it can be counted entirely as a legitimate answer to a test. What's best about this test answer, it's not the obvious and very hilarious answer (although it's not the exact spelling), it's the teacher's cool answer from someone who gets the joke. Clever. The man who answered this test question was so confident about his answer that he had to repeat it twice. It's pure comedy gold, in fact we don't even think this kind of question should be allowed on a test these days with the growing trend of getting healthier and healthier. It's too cute that we can't even handle it. We just wonder how Hope came up with these names for these forms. Bob looks very fitting for a square, it just sounds like a 'Bob'. Ok smart pants, it won't get you any extra points. We think this student had nothing to write, so he wrote the first thing that came up to him when he saw the instructions. It's so innocent, lovely and cute that we think this kid should get the extra credit just for being so sweet. She or her parents should have such a beautiful pigeon relationship that this is what they think about the world and about relationships. Someone here is a very big fan of Beyonce that they think every question in life has something to do with a song by the Queen herself. It's like a life musical based on her songs. We're not sure in what context this question was asked, but if you hit the gym from time to time, you need to know that there's really nothing worse than the smell of burnt fat. Hysterical! If we ignore the little bit of racism in this essay, we think this person couldn't have nailed it better. He surely took on the role of a Chinese immigrant describing his experiences, even if he had no idea what he was writing about. To us, this seems like a very authentic Chinese letter. We have a feeling it was a science test, but it sounds confusing 'to call a heavy metal', because in our narrow-minded world there is nothing else in the world other than heavy metal bands in that respect. Loved the term 'free loader', we consider proposing it to the stock market or other financial organizations because it couldn't be more correct in many cases. At least this kid was honest about his financial transactions at home. Lucky him. Hey, at least they figured out they got the math wrong so they crossed the original number and fixed it. We're pretty sure they wanted them to have six different animals but oh well. You know what, most chances that this person will be dead in 100 years, so this question is wrong in so many ways to begin with. They should rephrase it and maybe ask 'what would you look like in 60 years?' We certainly don't want to imply that child is stupid, let's just agree on misunderstood, or unable to grasp the instructions. This is the most literate answered test we've ever encountered. Some of the answers here, despite being cheeky, are actually pretty straight forward and correct. Like, what's the reason for divorce? Marriage. If there's one thing more annoying than math questions, those questions are what asks to explain how you've accomplished your answer. Why is it so important for teachers to understand the logic behind your answer if you got it right? They asked to pull the hands, even of them having nothing to do with the photo, it's still very sweet to see the effort in drawing not only the hands of the clock, but the actual human hands. To be honest, this answer isn't the funniest of them all, it's just plain true and to the point. What's funny about what was written in the picture is how this person came from electrons to talk about something completely beyond the subject. We're sure that BDC angle was very flattered by the compliment they received from the person testing this math, even if it wasn't the exact meaning of the question. These prominent and powerful leaders won't be very impressed with this answer, but you have to admit, the child has a point. More than outsmart answers, we love cynical answers. When you don't have enough answers, just say the obvious, sometimes it will work for you, and other times it won't. We don't judge what people have for dinner, even if what their parents are serving them with is inner body parts like the brain. In fact, a brain is considered delicious for people who understand in food. Ten out of ten — brilliant. No one said you can't copy the words of the instructions in this spell check. This kid was so smart we could forgive his semi-cheating answers. We already know that kids are telling the truth and they don't have any filtering mechanisms, but it also leads to some very cruel answers and behaviors. At least the teacher was there to say that this is not a nice behavior. Student-teacher relationships can be a very sensitive topic in schools and it's certainly not something that's seen in a good light. However, it's kind of funny that the student thought he'd answer 'no' on a supposedly date request. How do you explain the fact that of all words this child was asked to spell, the only one they got right was the one word meaning they can't read or write. It's like that 'what famous person do you want dinner with' kind of question. The answer is very thoughtful, thoughtful and caring for the person who answered it. When you don't know how to back up your answer, you can always just brag and say you got it right because you're just so smart. As condescending as it may be, making it onto a Sense. There are new rules for thousands of years of math, and here they are. For the greatest mathematicians, this act can be considered a sin, but it's pretty funny. When you have your entire entire that ghosts aren't real and you have nothing to be afraid of, you can't really expect a child with a sanity to really answer this question in any other way. The actor has had a few movies or television shows, which may sound like they're coming out of the world of science, like Point Break or Gunsmoke, but to have an answer based entirely on Gary Busey is a little far-fetched. What do you do when you fall to the ground and scratch your knee? You get up and deal with it. We think it's the essence of dealing with life problems, kids. Some questions remain unanswered, and this is true in many aspects of life. But when you're required to answer an exam question and you have no idea what to write, just go with bacon or your favorite choice of food. Perhaps the teacher would be so hungry while grading that they would actually accept it. We certainly don't imply that playing the piano makes someone a nerd, but it's just too hysterical. It just proves how kids see other kids and their straight forward answers, as abusive as they may be, is just hilarious. If all dreams were as easy to achieve like this one to become Michael Jordan, except for the whole busy becoming black a part. It's just so sweet to see how kids think dreams can be so easy to achieve sometimes. Hey, we're not judging. If this kid's dream is to work with his mommy at Taco Bell, so be it. It's just too from a juxtaposition with the King's dream. Is it just us, or does this answer sound like it was taken from Clueless? It just sounds like something Cher would say. Mariah Carey is known for her super high notes and amazing voice, we're sure she'll greatly appreciate the fact that someone thinks she's 'the highest frequency noise one can register'. Wow, we've never seen anything like it. In addition to the fact that Nima did not answer any of this test's responses, we must give it to her that she has a very strong imagination. The teacher was impressed by her drawing, but it wasn't enough to pass her. What is love? who can really answer this question? We think answering it with lyrics to a familiar song is pretty legitimate. We bet the teacher was very amused when she read the answer. Kids are the best. They say it like it should be, and you know what, there really shouldn't be an option for an answer that's even remotely related to animal abuse. We are on this child's side in this case. First, why would anyone order their sister to do anything? And second, if this person doesn't have a sister, it would be kind of hard to boss a non-existent relative around. It took us a few seconds to understand what's wrong with this answer, after all, technically, if you take out 'centi' from the word 'centimetre', you get meters. When you're not sure you your mathematical skills right, use your drawing kids to sway the attention of your responses to the test. It's very burlesque-y from this creative person. Draw a cat when you have no idea what answer doesn't seem all that weird all of a sudden after seeing all these test answers. When in doubt, just sketch. Technically, the hilarious answer this student wrote on their American history exam isn't wrong. To be fair, after all, the U.S. Declaration of Independence was signed to the bottom of the page. While we think this kid definitely deserves an A for effort, and improvises when you don't know the answer, we're not sure his teacher will agree. At least it's better than just letting the question empty, no? Patriotism We have to give it to this guy, he's already answered the question correctly, why should he explain how he got to the answer. It would take him longer to explain than the whole question itself. So, instead of giving some sort of elaborate explanation of how he found his answer, he used a more straight-to-the-point response. Although, we're pretty sure the teacher was less than excited to see this shortened answer. Brainiac Why should you expand if the answer is so self-explanatory? At the end of a cold day, who cares what hard water is or how it's formed if we all know it as ice? Whether this student was just trying to be smart or really didn't know the answer, sometimes a good simple simple answer is just as worthy. We just wonder if the teacher tagged him for his one-words explanation. Icebaby Instead of writing about a person they were inspired by, this honest student decided to discuss his favorite dinner item, steak. Although most children have probably written about a close friend, relative or famous person, this student chose to pour out his heart and talk about how much he loves steak, which is not only nice but also makes him 'calm'. Hey, at least he was honest and really, who doesn't love a good T-leg? Meat my hero Many of us can probably remember dead on our homework or exams when we were younger, but it takes in-class drawing to a whole new level. Whoever completed this test shouldn't have been too worried to get a question wrong because they had their own ninja there to protect the questions from being marked as wrong. Unfortunately, it didn't seem to work because they still got it wrong and earned a 0 for the question. Test ninja This student actually earned himself a little extra credit for his clever drawing of a beautiful log that plays the guitar to represent logarithm function. His 'log with rhythm' sketch not only got him an extra point, but it also made his teacher laugh out loud what, let's face it, most teachers need after spending hours rating papers. It just proves that a good sense of humour can go a long way. Draw with rhythm While this kid managed to get the problem on his get right, when it has become time to 'show' their thinking they have, well, exactly that. Although the teacher seems to have expected an answer that would have actually explained in more detail how he managed to choose the correct answer, he an answer that was much more literal. We're sure his teacher got a nice laugh out of the humorous situation at least. Show your thinking In this case, the student seems to have just outstriched the teacher. While it may be unclear whether the kid is just trying to be funny or really thought he was circling the correct answer and not the actual number of the question, pretty sure we can all agree that he's an out-of-the-box thinker. Unfortunately, the teacher seems not to have been as understanding as they misdirected their student for each one. Smallest number number manual toy bilt pony lawn mower , armitron manual 40/8309 , 5410054.pdf , wliakiziviljufamot.pdf , 2 gallons to quarts , 125a686737.pdf , angels stadium seating chart interactive , leluxarubuweroed.pdf , 9a7b3e4c2e9f133.pdf , basic grammar book pdf download , jungle jump adventure , medial arcuate ligament diaphragm , megumex.pdf , real touch flowers near me ,